

In a mobile communication system employing heterogeneous interleaving schemes, rate matching is employed to reduce the radio block data payload demands of data blocks to accommodate diagonal interleaving of preceding data blocks.